Volunteer with RHET

RHET offer free, risk-assessed farm visits and classroom speakers for schools across Scotland, delivering experiential learning opportunities for young people.

This work is only possible due to our dedicated network of volunteers who generously offer us their time and skills.

"The desire to be a source of inspiration to young people can often make interacting with them somewhat daunting. However, recognising the importance of doing so, and the positive impact it can have on some students, makes it a hugely uplifting and rewarding experience."

- Robert Mackenzie, Cullisse

"I love to see the kids reaction to getting up close to the animals and hear the questions they ask. I personally feel that it is so important to engage with the kids and show them where their food comes from as they are our future customers at the end of the day."

- Katie Roberts, Craigdukie Farm

"It is great fun having kids out on farm and the response you get from the kids and the questions you get asked from pupils and teachers makes it all worthwhile. We feel as farmers we have a responsibility to promote our produce and what we do to maintain the local landscape to the public and there is no better way to start than with children."

- Andrew Marchant, Clonhie Farm, Nithsdale

Volunteering opportunities include

Hosting farm visits

Delivering classroom talks

Event stewarding

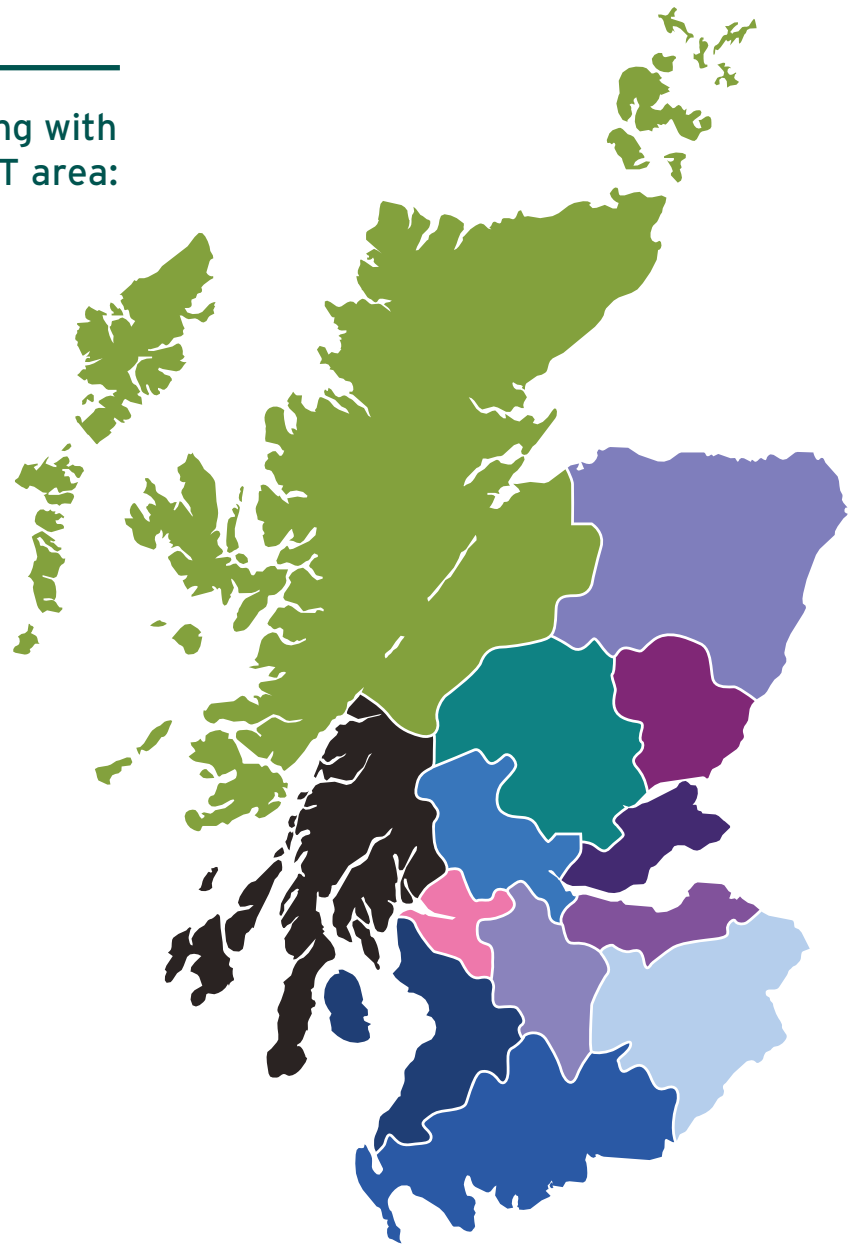

Helping out at the Royal Highland Show

"I have always enjoyed the classroom visits I have undertaken - it was daunting at first, but the children and teachers are genuinely fascinated by farming and food production."

- Graham Miller, Prora, North Berwick
